

OVER A HUNDRED FEMINIST BOOKSTORES across the United States and Canada have joined forces to bring you this beautiful collection of books, music and video that celebrate women's lives and work.

Feminist bookstores showcase the most exciting books by, about and for women — books about our lives, our changes, and our challenges. We know that having a strong and vibrant literature of women has a tremendous impact on our lives and on our ability to make needed change. We keep women's literature on the national agenda and, unlike our imitators, feminist bookstores celebrate women's lives and literature every day — not just when it's trendy or profitable to do so.

With your continued and dedicated support, feminist bookstores will not only survive the onslaught of the chains and super-chains that are trying to dominate book distribution in North America, we will thrive and continue to set the standard to which corporate bookstores aspire.

Please order these books — and other books you wish to purchase — from the feminist bookstores who brought you this catalog. A directory of these stores begins on page 38 and you'll find an order form on page 43. The directory includes fax numbers and e-mail and web site addresses for the electronically inclined as well as addresses and phone numbers for telephone and mail orders — or better yet, just drop by the nearest feminist bookstore and browse the entire collection.

Writers and readers who wish to go one step further are invited to turn to page 40 and "take the pledge" to support feminist bookstores.

Writers and Readers Supporting Feminist Bookstores

As readers, writers, feminists and political activists, we believe in the enormous power of words to inform, inspire and challenge.

WRITERS PLEDGE:

IN ORDER for our words to be read and heard, we must rely on publishers and bookstores to bring our work to the public.

Feminist and other independent bookstores and small presses have been supporting and distributing our books — poetry, novels, essays, plays and photography — for many years. We count on them. They have been publishing and carrying our books because they are owned and run by people who care about ideas and take risks for the sake of social and political change.

Independent bookstores are now an endangered species because of the rise of corporate-owned chain bookstores that engage in predatory pricing and discount policies. The more corporate bookstores control the market, the less likely it will be that they and the publishing industry will take risks on new or controversial ideas and authors — and the more control the corporations will have over what we all read.

Without feminist and other independent bookstores and small presses, some of us could be silenced and the next generation of writers with important ideas might never be found.

AS WRITERS, WE PLEDGE THE FOLLOWING:

- We will remain committed to supporting feminist and other independent bookstores.
- We will seek out local feminist and other independent bookstores in each city or town to do our first reading or booksigning.
- We will donate our time and talents to community events and campaigns that support feminist and other independent bookstores.

And we ask readers to shop at feminist and other independent bookstores as often as possible — to think of shopping at feminist bookstores as an investment in freedom of expression and independent thinking.

READERS PLEDGE:

CITY OF DARKNESS. CITY OF LIGHT MARGE PIERCY

The valorous men of the French Revolution are legendary, but there is a story long forgotten: the perseverance and brilliance of the women. In her new epic novel, the author of the bestseller Gone to Soldiers re-creates the role that women played in this tumultuous turning point in European history. Here, besides unforgettable characters, are untold stories of Paris: a dazzling protagonist in itself. FAWCETT BOOKS $24.00 HARDCOVER
